

Testimonials for Whole Systems Design: Inquiries in the Knowing Field

“I was told there was a twinkle in my eyes when I was reading the manuscript. Yes, this work describes different forms of practice of evolutionary leadership that offers impact with healing and hope, possibility, and potential to co-create collectively, serving the emergence of a conscious, harmonic Humanity.”

Drs Anne-Marie Voorhoeve, Co-Founder, The Hague Center for Global Governance, Innovation and Emergence, www.thehaaguecenter.org

“This book, and the people doing this Collective Constellation Work, introduced me to a whole other way of being in the world, a way that honours the collective and its power to access deep knowing.” Judith Miller, PhD

“The author’s detailed step-by-step description lets readers see behind the curtain of facilitation. She also gives the most succinct presentation of the impact of Systemic Constellation Work that I have come across. She highlights the value of accessing different types of knowing which change people’s perceptions of an issue. People with changed perception then go on to change systems.” Jake Jennings, MBA, DBA

For constellators:

This is one of the best books about constellations I have read. Diana Claire is so generous in sharing her own experiences, her learnings, deep spiritual insights, and detailed processes for expanding constellation praxis into the area of societal change, where it is urgently needed. I will be returning to this book again and again as I grow my own practice.

What a gift Whole Systems Design is!!! I am so grateful to you for sharing it with me/the world! I feel inspired, supported, cautioned and blessed by the wisdom, insights and love you have poured into sharing your learning journey with those of us who want to take our understanding of Systemic Constellations to deeper and more expansive places.

For consultants, systemic change agents:

Those of us who face the ‘wicked problems’ of societal issues know how difficult it can be to find a method that adequately frames issues and provides pathways to sustainable transformation. This is the most robust and comprehensive manual I have found, based in the new intersections of science, spirit and deep change methods, that finally adequately addresses all necessary parameters, wrapped in a very easily readable, approachable package I heartily recommend this to change agents anywhere.

Whole Systems Design: Inquiries in the Knowing Field offers a critical and innovative approach to understanding and leading in an ever increasingly complex world. 'Systemic Constellation Work' has been around for a few decades and it's time has come to be a mainstream solution. Diana Claire is evolving the work by generously sharing her experience and step-by-step methods for Constellating for the Collective, a must-have systemic approach especially necessary during the novel unknowns of the 21st Century. Calling all innovators, change agents, systems thinkers, leaders, and constellators - this book is worthy of your attention!!

In Whole Systems Design, Inquiries in the Knowing Field, Diana Claire Douglas, an experienced and clear-sighted exponent of Systemic Constellation Work (or as she calls her work Constellating for the Collective), shares her decades of experimental and emergent explorations, including her ongoing research into its communal benefits, to our and the whole world's great and hopeful benefit.

Especially when framed by a wholeworld-view of unitive consciousness, Constellation Works' innate power and emergent potential to uncover meaningful answers to existential questions, guide choices, and derive effective actions to achieve collective aims and goals, is in my experience unsurpassed.

Impact beyond Constellation Work:

"Ever since Barbara Marx Hubbard mentioned her notion of 'state specific memory' at a gathering I attended, I have paid attention to when the state of my consciousness shifts. While reading Diana Claire's Whole System Design, ideas started to drop in for an article, a new approach for a potential book. In other words, reading this book not only gave me valuable insights into the method of gaining information for the collective from the Knowing Field, it also opened me to this field, and gave me state-specific insights for my own work. I keep the book nearby now as a portal to higher level information that I am not always open to in my day-to-day. What a gift!"
